

The Pop-Up Home Depot

No email, no mobile phones... how did soldiers and their families keep in touch during the First World War?

They sent over 2 billion letters and 140 million parcels, that's how. And every single one went through The Regent's Park.

Come and find out more

- Pitch in and join the 2500 people who worked at the Home Depot to get mail to the soldiers, at our interactive sorting office.
- Discover how the Post Office kept the war going - and how jammy buns kept them going - at our First World War outdoor exhibition.
- Write a postcard about the First World War to a soldier, a postwoman, your grandparents, or a parks gardener.

Drop in any time and enjoy free activities suitable for all

11 - 3pm, Saturdays 12 and 19 May
Cumberland Green (South), The Regent's Park

www.royalparks.org.uk/whats-on/upcoming-events/

Postal workers at the Home Depot on Armistice Day 1918
© Royal Mail Group Ltd, courtesy of the Postal Museum.